The Client

The Litchfield Historical Society was looking for a new storage solution to replace their basic stationary shelving. They needed something with more capacity in the available space, and something that could better organize their collection of artifacts.

The types of artifacts ranged from period clothing to textiles, pottery, and more, they needed a shelving system that could be flexible enough to store everything while still allowing room for future growth.

Storage Solution

Two MobileTrak5® Hybrid systems equipped with 4Post™ shelving were installed to fix the historical society's storage troubles.

The MobileTrak5® systems maximized the capacity and use of the available floorspace, while the 4Post™ shelving offered them flexibility in what they could store, and durability that they could depend on.

The new storage systems provided adequate space for the existing collection, as well as ample room to expand and grow with time. The historical society could now organize and easily keep track of their stored items and access the systems more efficiently.

"The system is amazing. We are using half the space and have plenty of room to grow."
